PONY PARTY

The Resolution Horse Company is known for its work pairing horses with special-needs children to provide healing and restoration. In 2012, we did it over 2,000 times. In 2013, we're going to double that. This means more riding sessions, equipment, and volunteers. Many people see the transformational results Resolution achieves and want to join us in improving the lives of others. Unfortunately, though, most folks don't have the time to conduct riding sessions with the children. But there is something else that is absolutely critical for the program to succeed, and that is funding. Without funding, there is no hay and no horses. No saddles. No horseshoes. No training for volunteers. No veterinarians. And that's where Pony Parties come in.

What is a Pony Party? A Pony Party is a social event organized by a volunteer host. Friends, coworkers, and neighbors gather to enjoy each others' company and learn about Resolution Horse Company. A Resolution representative (generally the president or program director) gives a 15-minute presentation describing Resolution's work and the dramatic improvements in the children's lives that result. An accompanying slideshow shows the horses and children in action. At the conclusion of the talk, attendees are invited to make a financial contribution that will get more children onto horses. Attendees are also invited to visit Resolution to see firsthand how their funds are directly helping individual children.

Why host a Pony Party? Most people who want to make significant improvements in children's lives are not able to quit their jobs to do so. Fortunately, Pony Parties enable anyone to directly impact a child's life. In addition to providing critically needed funding for Resolution, Pony Parties educate the general public about the healing effects of horses with children and show how Resolution does it. The parties also present opportunities for individuals to consider volunteering at Resolution or hosting a party of their own. And somebody at the party may learn of a new option for healing and restoration for their own family.
